ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT: Jisheng Li, Esquire

CHARGE:

Notice: Sec. 212(a)(6)(A)(i), I&N Act [8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i)] -

APPLICATION: Asylum; withholding of removal

ORDER:

PER CURIAM. This case is presently before us pursuant to the (b) (6) decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the (b) (6). The court reversed the Board's finding that the respondent had not shown that the respondent's actions constituted "other resistance" to China's family planning practices. It remanded the case for a finding whether the respondent suffered past persecution on account of this resistance, or has a well-founded fear of future persecution in China. In view of the court's decision, which requires factual findings, the record will be remanded to the Immigration Judge. Accordingly, the decision of the Board in this case dated June 15, 2005, is vacated and the record is remanded to the Immigration Judge for further proceedings consistent with the court's decision.

APPEAL

ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT: Charles Kinnunen, Esquire

CHARGE:

Notice: Sec. 212(a)(6)(A)(i), I&N Act [8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i)] -

APPLICATION: Asylum; withholding of removal; Convention Against Torture

ORDER:

PER CURIAM. On (b) (6) the United States Court of Appeals for the (b) (6) granted the Government's unopposed motion to remand this matter to the Board. In the motion to remand, the Government requests that the Board be given an opportunity to reconsider its prior decision in this matter, in light of (b) (6) precedent regarding when and under what circumstances an alien may be required to produce corroborating evidence. The (b) (6) has held that "when an alien credibly testifies to certain facts, those facts are deemed true, and the question remaining to be answered becomes whether these facts, and their reasonable inferences, satisfy the elements of the claim for relief. No further corroboration is required." See Ladha v. INS, 215 F.3d 889, 900 (9th Cir. 2000). However, the Government notes that the Board required the alien to submit corroborating evidence, despite having overturned the Immigration Judge's adverse credibility determination.

While we recognize that requiring the respondent to submit corroborating evidence after finding his testimony credible was not in compliance with (b) (6) precedent, we find no error in our conclusion that the respondent failed to meet his burden of proof to establish eligibility for asylum or withholding of removal under sections 208 and 241(b)(3) of the Immigration and Nationality Act or protection under the Convention Against Torture. Based upon our review of the record, we find that the respondent has not established that he falls within the definition of refugee on the basis of his having fought with birth control officials, who were removing furniture and other belongings from his family's house (Tr. at 17-19). The respondent has not demonstrated that these actions constitute "other resistance" to the government's family planning policies, such that he would be subject to persecution upon his return to China. See 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(42). The respondent has not shown that the officials' threat to arrest him after he was involved in an altercation with one of the officials was on account of an anti-government opinion being imputed to him, rather than as a result of his having confronted the birth control officials, who were attempting to do their job. The applicant has not established that an arrest would have been for a purpose other than an investigation into the incident and the possible levying of a criminal charge for interfering with the birth control officials' performance of their duties. He therefore has not met his burden of establishing that he has a well-founded fear of persecution on account of his actions regarding the birth control officials' removal of furniture from his family's house. We find that the evidence of record, considered cumulatively, does not show that the respondent has met his burden of demonstrating that he has suffered past persecution or has a well-founded fear of persecution on account of one of the five grounds for which asylum may be granted. See Matter of S-A-, 22 I&N Dec. 1328 (BIA 2000). Inasmuch as the respondent has failed to meet the burden of proof for asylum, it follows that he has also failed to satisfy the higher standard required for withholding of removal. See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421 (1987). Similarly, we find that the respondent has failed to establish that he would be tortured, by or at the acquiescence of the Chinese government, as required for protection under the Convention Against Torture. Accordingly, we do not disturb the outcome of our prior decision.
